Letter from Langshott

Dear Friends & Creative Thinkers,

27th February, 2022

We are naturally spirit beings.

There is no stopping when one is inspired by a great purpose. To be inspired is to be in spirit and be filled with a gripping force that makes it possible to undergo total self-transformation.

The French scientist and Jesuit priest Pierre Chardin must have been deeply inspired to postulate 'We are not human beings having a spiritual experience, we are spiritual beings having a human experience', meaning 'we are on this planet, but not of this Planet'.

These inspired words are powerful enough to shift paradigms. Suddenly thoughts break their bonds and the mind transcends all limiting barriers. In expanded consciousness, one realizes that we, as spirit beings, are living in falsehood. Whilst masquerading as humans we are living entrapped in what is not our natural habitat unlike fish in water.

Evidently, we don't belong here, nor does anything here belong to us, not even our identity, culture, religion, or our physical body. We have no right to assert our mastery over anyone or anything, not even a pebble, as transient beings.

This is the mindset of some amongst us who have embraced this truth about us humans and have transformed to living in a state of the mind saturated with a sense of detachment that comes from an overarching feeling of being permanently in a spirit form. The state of detachment is not that you have no attachment to anything, but rather you allow nothing to pervert your mind and thoughts. You live amid everyone and everything but are never challenged by situations because you entertain no sense of any loss as permanent. This sense of 'no right to own or no permanent loss' has given birth to philanthropy in the world on the part of many wealthy individuals who give away large swathes of their wealth to worthy causes. As a spirit being you live free of any dogma in a universe of limitless existence and no judgment, and you see the futility of existing as a mere human. When you've reached the pinnacle of awareness of your existence on a celestial plane, nothing is lost, nothing is gained.

“What is Here, Is There, Is Everywhere”
When you bond with these words,
You will know Inseparability!

Be blessed.

A passage from The Sequel to 'Good Bye, Mr. Patel' by Anil Kumar First Published in 2018.

Run your own race.

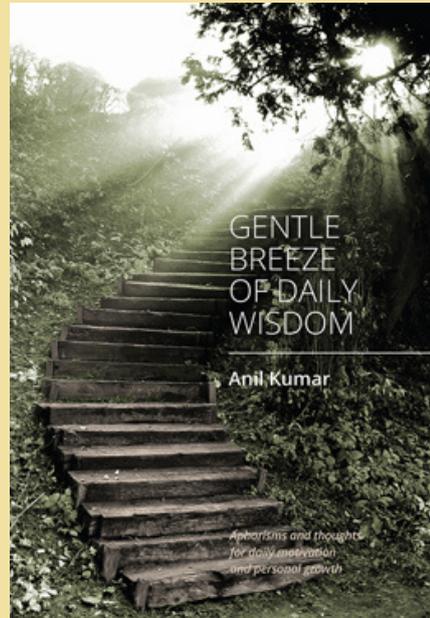

This wisdom is about always knowing that you are connected with others, yet, at the same time, not being compelled to march in unison with them. It is about being singularly dedicated to your purpose, your inner calling, with consummate trust in Nature to be your ally. It is about blazing your own trail which at first appears to be gruelling as it demands that your actions and behaviour be out of sync with those of others, but when you envision what you would like to become and be enthralled with the thought that it is already happening, inspiration takes hold of you, and you find you are trawling through life with certitude in a whole new state of total abandon. Your ideas and plans are not punctured by thoughts of failure although you may, from time to time, slip, tumble and stumble. The security offered by conformity with the norms of society and conventional living no longer outweighs your resolve to remain committed to your purpose. Everyone around you is conditioned by a uniform interpretation of teachings, education and information. They are therefore in formation, all singing from the same hymn sheet. You are motivated to break free from this mould, and this makes you stand out quite distinctively from the crowd. This places you on a unique path, but not a lone one because the Force of Nature is your ally collaborating with you to make your dreams come true. As the alliance with this Force strengthens, you realise that your dreams are not yours – you are Nature's instrument and it actually wants you to mirror its intentions. Nothing is achieved by you but through you. This revelation puts you on a higher road to inner growth and lasting happiness
