

Langshott Leadership Foundation

Letter from Langshott

5th September, 2021

My Dear friends and creative thinkers,

“To strive not to take credit for any inspired deeds, and to put the glory of all such deeds in the lap of the Higher Force is an act of supreme humility”
from My Working Creed

The bearer of the mind that soars to extreme heights of imagination and is accustomed to living in the world of all possibilities, will never parade exuberance even after winning an Olympic Gold or scoring a hole-in-one, for they feel and know that they have already been there previously in their mind. Extreme exuberance at the instance of any good fortune is only for the novice who is not yet aware of the secret faculties placed in all of us.

For the hardened cosmic dweller every event, no matter how astounding, is simply déjà vu. This is how they typify humility - an innate quality, not a façade.

The authentically humble travel in their mind, not in a spaceship.

Anil Kumar

Blogs

A Letter to an Aspiring Undergraduate

Characteristics of a Robust Business These stand-out attributes of a robust business

Read More

Overcoming Suffering

Suffering needs no explaining. Virtually everyone has experienced suffering of one kind or

Read More

Anil's Working Creed

I believe that to strive to amass wealth is not immoral but it is a form of lust when it ceases to be a goal and becomes a purpose a perpetual grind, in life.

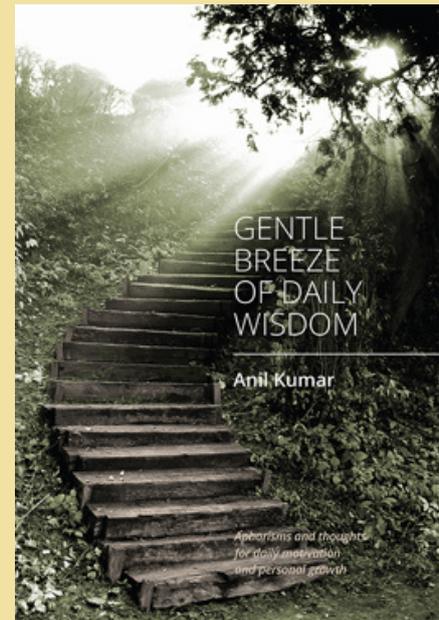

Books by Langshott (Anil Kumar)

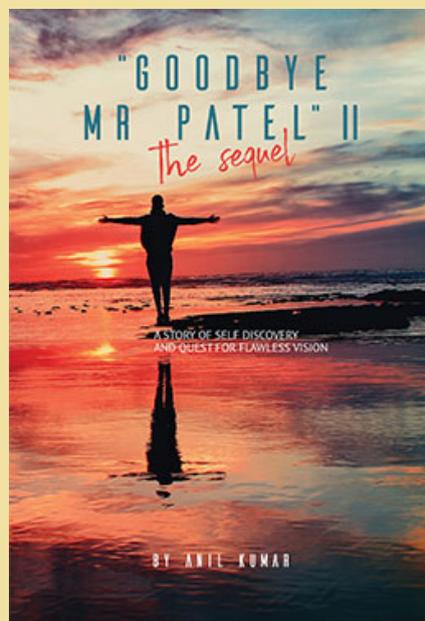

Goodbye Mr. Patel

Hard Cover & E-Book

Gentle Breeze of Daily Wisdom

Hard Cover

Goodbye Mr. Patel II - The Sequel

Hard Cover & E-Book